Committee grants budget approval continuance

By Colette Fraley

The approval of a revised budget for the literary magazine and a scheduled Dec. 1 review hearing for the continuance of the Chief Justice were the results of a Nov. 10 meeting of the Publications and Public Relations Committee.

The PPRC voted to recommend to President Robert B. Hayes a $3,750 budget for et cetera for 1982-83, which is a decrease of approximately $1,000 from its current budget.

The decrease was necessary because of a rise in the cost of off-campus printing, which, if continued, would have resulted in a deficit budget for the 1982-83 magazine.

Diane L. McClain, Barboursville senior and editor of et cetera, made arrangements with Graphic Services (which does some campus printing) to print the book for the next two years,

Nine out of 10 students against new quiet hours

An unscientific random survey was conducted by Parthenon reporters to see how Buskirk Hall residents liked the new quiet hours which began Nov. 9 from 9 p.m. to 8 a.m. during the week and from midnight to 11 a.m. on weekend.

Nine out of 10 residents who were surveyed were against the new quiet hours.

Mary Alice Pullen, Scott Depot junior, said she liked the new quiet hours.

"It's easier to study at nine than it is at 11 and I don't have to run all over campus to find a place to study," Pullen said.

Sue E. Hobb, Moundsville sophomore, said she didn't like to be treated as a 10-year-old.

"I think they (quiet hours) were fine the way they were (from 11 p.m. to 8 a.m. on weekdays)," Hobb said.

Tammy L. Rice, Fort Gay sophomore, said she thought the majority of Buskirk residents were against the new policy.

"We have a petition against it," Rice said. "We hope to get over half or even two-thirds of the residents signatures so we can take it to the residence life office and voice our opinion."

Jane McMannus, Ripley freshman, said the library and study lounges were provided for those who needed quiet to study.

Debby Wilson, Ravenswood freshman, said she felt she was being dictated to, and she didn't think it was fair for Buskirk to be the only residence hall with this new policy implementation. Tina M. Harness, Yellow Springs freshman, said she thinks the residence hall should not be a concentration camp.

"If we residents didn't live here, they wouldn't have to worry about quiet hours," Harness said. "We live here as well as study here. The next thing you know they'll be telling us when to go to bed."

Marshall history completed

Twenty years in the making

By Micki Auer

After more than 20 years of thought and four years of constant research, Charles Hill Moffat, chairman emeritus, Department of History, completed his book about the history of Marshall — "Marshall University — An Institution Comes of Age."

Moffat said the original request for a written history of Marshall came from former Marshall President Stewart H. Smith in 1961.

Moffat said he waited to write the history so the Department of History would not be short of professors, and he could devote more time to it. During the next 20 years, Moffat said he interviewed scores of people about the subject of Marshall University.

In 1977, when Moffat officially retired, he began to devote his entire time to working on the history of Marshall. He worked obsessively, day and night, taking the materials with him wherever he went.

Moffat said his sources include well-documented primary interviews and secondary information from catalogs, old "Parthenons" old "Mirabilias" (Marshall's early yearbook), alumni magazines, newspapers and periodicals.

He said another aid to his work was his reading of 35 other college and university histories.

Moffat said he thinks it is better to have a historian rather than an alumnus write a history of an institution, because an alumnus tends to be biased.

Moffat's book differs from other histories in that there are about 150 photographs placed in juxtaposition to context, rather than in the middle or the back of the book.

"The photography is incomparable," Moffat said. "So are the choreography, printing, binding and format. The book is beautiful."

Until now, Moffat said the only written history of Marshall has been a master's thesis written in 1950 by Robert Chase Toole of West Virginia University.

Yet, with any undertaking of this magnitude, Moffat did encounter some difficulties.

"We had all kinds of problems," Moffat said. "Problems in gathering material, making sure sources are valid, ascertaining what is important, distinguishing what is unimportant from that which is important and not leaving anything out."

He said he was always checking and rechecking material. But, "you have to print the dimples as well as the warts, or else it isn't history," he said.

"There are some mistakes — I regret that. But, there is no perfect book, except Holy Writ."

The book is oriented toward three groups — students, faculty and alumni.

"The students are valid to the school. The faculty are the intellectual dynamo, and the alumni keep the school going," he said.

The book is dedicated to the "Sons and Daughters of Marshall," both living and deceased, who have passed through these portals, he said.

"It couldn't have been done without the aid of the Alumni Office, Karen C. Thomas (director of Alumni Affairs and executive director of the Alumni Association) and her staff."

"My wife, Mary, was an inspiration to me as well."

"Cora P. Teel, archivist in the Special Collections section of the James E. Morrow Library, helped in that I could just go to her and ask for something, and she would get it."

"I'm proud of the people who helped me. Lord knows I am."

Moffat said he personally lived 35 years of the history of Marshall, and he profited a great deal from emeriti professors who are still living.

"I am still trying to validate things in my own mind," he said. "I tried to cover so much."

"I'd wake up in the middle of the night in a cold sweat. When you work at something so long, you question your own memory."

Contains listing of faculty works

Publication of Research and Arts Bulletin approved

By Sara Crickenberger

Publication of the Marshall University Research and Creative Arts Bulletin has been approved by the Research Board.

The bulletin, which is normally published every three years, contains a listing of the research and fine arts works and performances published or presented in some manner by members of the university faculty, according to Dr. Paul D. Stewart, chairman of the Research Board and Dean of the Graduate School.

Publication of the bulletin will cost approximately $600, Stewart said.

Dr. A. Mervin Tyson, a consultant for the university, will act as general editor of the bulletin. The members of the Research Board will act as associate editors and cover each college or other area to be included in the bulletin.

Works to be included in the bulletin are to have taken place during the time period of January 1979 to December 1981. Additions to the bulletin will be solicited from any members of the faculty who are involved in such work.

The Research Board is also publishing a newsletter of current research projects.

It is to be a communication vehicle for the different areas of the university, according to Dr. Corey Lock, co-editor of the newsletter and assistant professor of education.

Investigative, data gathering, literary or historical scholarship work will be included in the newsletter, Lock said.

It will also provide space for research announcements and grant application deadlines and may include a feature article and guest column, Lock said.

The $600 estimated cost will provide for four issues of the newsletter. Tentative dates for publication of the first two editions are Feb. 15 and April 19, Lock said.

The board also decided to continue giving annual research awards for projects submitted by the university faculty.

Areas of competition are the colleges of business, education, liberal arts, science and the school of medicine and allied health sciences.

Awards of up to $350 previously had been given to recipients of the awards, but a decision was made to reduce or eliminate the monetary awards this year on the basis that the primary desire to do research overrules the necessity of giving monetary awards.

Recognition and a plaque will be the primary awards presented this year.

A grand prize, which had previously been awarded to one of the five division winners, has also been eliminated.

Works published or presented, as in the creative arts, will be considered for the awards. The deadline for application is March 15, 1982.

MU Singers perform Tuesday in Recital Hall

By Lisa Bailey

The Marshall University Singers will perform 50 minutes of non-stop music from artists such as Kool And The Gang and Barry Manilow Tuesday in Smith Recital Hall.

"The show includes pop songs, some choreography and some solos," Jane Martin, music instructor specialist, said.

Soloists include: Dirk Carter, Huntington sophomore; Debbie Wassum, Huntington graduate, singing "For Your Eyes Only," and Oda Casto, Ripley freshman, who will sing "Believe It Or Not."

Charles Martin, Huntington junior, and Mary Beth Adkins, Charleston freshman, will do solo dancing, she said.

"This is my first semester with the singers and next semester I'm going to try some different things," Martin said.

A rhythm section including guitars, keyboards and bass will be added to the singers next semester, she said.

"We gave a short performance at the student center during Homecoming week but this is our first concert," she said.

A horn section may also be added next semester for a possible performance of some big band music, she said.

"We're planning a three-day tour of some West Virginia schools to promote Marshall," she said. "There's also a chance of some day trips to local schools next semester."

Auditions for next semester are Jan. 11 and 12 from 12:30 p.m. to 2 p.m. in Smith Music Hall Room 107.

Auditions consist of a solo of the auditioner's choice from pop or show music, no opera, Martin said.

Auditions are open to all Marshall students and one hour credit is given for participation in the University Singers, she said.

"It's going to be good, relaxed fun for everyone who comes," she said.

Nursing applications accepted

By Debbie Jackson

Applications for next fall's School of Nursing program will be accepted until Feb. 15, according to Judy Sortet, associate program faculty member.

Those wishing to apply must simultaneously file a Marshall University application from the Office of Admissions and appropriate School of Nursing forms.

They also need to submit results of the American College Test (ACT), and copies of their official high school transcript and transcripts of completed college courses.

University applications may be submitted to the secretary's office, School of Nursing, on the fourth floor of Pritchard Hall.

Applications are judged on a competitive basis, and those not accepted may apply again next year. Applicants should be notified of their acceptance or rejection by March, Sortet said.

Yearbook accepts printing bid

By Colette Fraley

The Chief Justice has accepted a $13,648 bid from Walsworth Publishing Company for the printing of the 1981-82 yearbook, Chief Justice adviser Betsy B. Cook said.

"That bid is very much under what we had anticipated," she said. "We originally had planned to spend approximately $24,000 for the printing."

Cook said Dr. Deryl R. Leaming, director of the W. Page Pitt School of Journalism, has indicated the money which was saved by the low bid would not be used for expanding this year's planned 208-page book, but would be saved for future use.

Cook said the Chief Justice received bids ranging from the accepted low $13,648 to a high of $16,000 from four other publishing companies including American, Taylor, Delmar and Herf Jones.

A local representative of the Missouri-based company will be checking with the staff of the yearbook on a weekly basis, Cook said.

"She'll be keeping in contact with us to see if we need any help with guidelines or in case problems with the book arise," she said.

which was less expensive than off-campus facilities and prevented the deficit from occurring next year.

The PPRC also voted to recommend to the Student Fees Committee a $.15 per semester increase in student fees for use by the literary magazine.

The review hearing, which is in keeping with President Hayes' mandate to the PPRC to appoint a task force and make a report about the viability of The Chief Justice, is scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. in the President's Conference Room in Old Main.

Elizabeth R. Barker, assistant professor of nursing and head of the PPRC, said the ad hoc committee formed to decide the best method for studying the situation had decided upon a five-part plan.

Barker said the committee decided to send questionnaires concerning the Chief Justice with reference to their specific areas to Dr. Deryl R. Leaming, director of the W. Page Pitt School of Journalism; Dr. Corey Lock, assistant professor of curriculum and foundation; the archivists of the library; Michael F. Thomas, vice president of Financial Affairs and Karen C. Thomas, director of Alumni Affairs.

Barker said the answers from these individuals at the review hearing would be followed by an opportunity for any student to voice his opinion about the continuance of the Chief Justice beginning at 10:40 a.m., Dec. 1.

Project coordinator halts visitors; construction progresses on schedule

By Randy Rorrer

Since Gene G. Kuhn pulled the welcome mat out from under the feet of visitors at the Cam Henderson Center, its construction has progressed on schedule.

Kuhn, special project coordinator, said that the problem of visitors interrupting workers on the site has eased considerably since he made the Henderson Center off-limits to all visitors last week.

"There has been no aggravation this week," Kuhn said. "We still play ball here Friday (November 27 against Army), but the building won't be complete."

Kuhn said the only things that will be in use are the concession stands, rest rooms and the basketball floor.

The problem of getting the seating installed, which threatened to delay the opening of the center, has been solved.

"All the seating will be complete," Kuhn said. "At least that's what the workers tell me. It should be done unless we have some unforeseen major problem come up."

Kuhn said work which will need to be completed after the opening of the center includes hooking the motors up for retractable seats and some fine-tuning on the rest of the building.

"We will still need to do some little things to get the 'bugs' out of the building," he said. "We will have to fine-tune the stacking procedure for the seats and on the heating and air-conditioning systems probably."

"I wish we had it all done now so we could put a fine polish on it before everyone came in to get their first look at it," he said.

Christian rock band to perform today

By Donna Cox

Spirit Aflame, a contemporary Christian rock band, will perform at 8 p.m. today in the Campus Christian Center and has more to offer than entertainment - they have a message to sing.

"We sing about the original message of Jesus Christ, made 2,000 years ago, in today's music," Jeff D. Riley, Huntington freshman and band member, said.

Spirit Aflame's musical style is much like the Imperials, a popular Christian rock band, and they also enjoy playing music by Dallas Holmes, a more mellow sound, Riley said.

Riley is a music major here at Marshall and said he hopes eventually to play bass professionally.

Riley said he began playing in a country gospel group, the New Galileans, with his father, but wanted to play contemporary gospel music. So a little more than a year ago, Spirit Aflame was formed. Since then they have performed in 35 concerts in and out of West Virginia.

"A lot of older people don't approve, but if one person is won to Christ, it is all worth it," Riley said.

Other band members include Robert Shawn Bias, Mike K. Ball and Phil A. Riley.

Student tickets to Army game going slow

Pickup of student tickets for Marshall's basketball season opener against Army Nov. 27 has been slow, according to Joe W. Wortham, athletic ticket manager.

As of Thursday morning, about 300 students had requested tickets for the game, according to figures released by the office. Students are allotted 3,408 seats in the new Cam Henderson Center.

Wortham said one reason the tickets are not going very quickly is because the Army game is during the university's Thanksgiving holiday.

Any student tickets remaining Monday will be made available to the general public for a cost of $5, although students still will be able to pick up these tickets as long as the supply lasts, Wortham said.

The ticket office is located on Fifth Avenue across from Twin Towers. Office hours are 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

FOR THE RECORD

Athletic program needs new direction, new director

Editor's Note: This is the final installment of a three-part editorial. The first part dealt with the events on campus this semester involving members of the football team. The second part focused on the parties at fault. The final segment will highlight what changes need to be made within the department.

To date, the Athletic Department has turned to stopgap measures when faced with problems within the football program. To end the series of incidents that has left Marshall with a black eye and a damaged pride, immediate steps must be taken.

First, football players, as well as other athletes, must be treated like other students on this campus.

Currently athletes sleep in a separate residence hall and football players eat different food at special times of the day. We suggest they sleep in a residence hall meant for students besides athletes and football players eat the same food as other students at the same times.

These changes can only come about when the Athletic Department accepts the fact athletes are not special students to be treated with kid gloves and buried in fringe benefits. Like any other students, athletes must be given the opportunity to exist with other students not just for their benefit, but for ours as well.

The Athletic Department and the university must realize the best way to handle uncomfortable or embarrassing incidents is not by trying to cover them up, but by being open and honest with the public.

President Robert B. Hayes must open his eyes to the happenings around him. He cannot sit back condoning the actions of administrators he is responsible for when those administrators blatantly violate student rights.

Hayes must treat his administrators as harshly, if not more so, than the students. He should spend more time complaining to the Athletic Department about its questionable actions than to The Parthenon for covering them.

The university must be realistic in accessing the future of the football program.

Marshall will close out its 17th straight losing season Saturday. Marshall is playing in one of the weakest conferences in the country. The football team is a financial disaster. It must be supported by hundreds of thousands of dollars of state dollars and student athletic fees that Hayes rose again this year.

Athletic Director Dr. Lynn J. Snyder said he is confident the program will turn around within the next three years. Unfortunately, we have heard that before.

Snyder has also said the department will have to cut minor sports back significantly in the coming years as costs continue to rise and state support drops. In other words, the future of the athletic program at Marshall is largely dependent on how the football program fares in the next few years.

Looking at the whole picture, the only solution is to drop division status.

By lowering division status, Marshall could compete against teams of similar talent. We would no longer have to suffer the embarrassment of a team that loses consistently.

More importantly, we could operate a football program that was financially sound. A winning team is going to bring fans to Fairfield Stadium. A winning team is going to bring more community support in the form of Big Green donations. A winning team is going to mean growth, not death, for Marshall football and the entire athletic program.

Lowering division status may not be a popular move among alumni circles and even some students and faculty, but it is a step that must be taken if athletics is to continue on the same level at Marshall in the coming years.

These changes are vital if the department is to keep what little credibility it has left and remain fiscally sound in the coming years.

Even if these changes are made, we do not believe the current athletic director has the ability or sensitivity to build a respectable program.

Snyder authorized the illegal search of students' rooms and the seizure of student property. This action clearly shows a lack of respect for student privacy rights, much less the law.

Snyder came to The Parthenon after we learned of the search and removal of property. He asked us not to print the information so the players would continue to trust him.

Snyder has lost credibility with the football players, the largest single segment of athletes.

Snyder has lost credibility with all the responsible media. Sports columnists at other newspapers in the state were amazed at the way in which he handled the residence hall search and other incidents this semester. His standard line is, "We are taking appropriate action." Snyder's lack of openness and honesty has become a hallmark of his department.

Snyder has failed to handle the pressure brought on a person of his position. Regardless of how well an Athletic Department is run at Marshall, there is going to be pressure. The current director is not cut out to handle this pressure and has shown this fact to us on several occasions.

All this leads us to call for the resignation of Snyder.

If Snyder fails to take this step, the decision falls to President Robert B. Hayes. We believe the president can push aside his feelings for Snyder and the media attention a dismissal would bring for the good of the university. If he cannot, his credibility with the students and faculty of this university will take another drop. A drop Hayes cannot afford.

Our philosophy is not that of Vince Lombardi, "Winning is everything," but the British philosophy, "It's not whether you win or lose, but how you play the game." In that respect, Marshall has lost on both fields.

Correction

The Parthenon would like to apologize to all members of Alpha Sigma Phi for the cartoon printed Thursday. It was not meant to offend any members of the fraternity as it apparently did.

deal of history in there."

"It's a good reference book. This book, unlike other histories, brings the history up to the present. The tendency would be to end the book about 1973, so as not to offend the contemporaries."

The history covers Marshall from 1837 to 1980, particularly the time after Marshall became a four-year, degree-granting college in 1920.

Marshall has managed to "snatch" a degree of evanescent publicity, such as a gas well on campus, students rowing to class in boats, girls going to class in shorts in 1930 and Marshall College
Day at the World's Fair, Moffat said.

Events in the book include World
Wars I and II, The Great Depression, the bicentennial celebration in 1976 and the plane crash in 1970.

Tradition also is included in the book

— the John Marshall statue, the Beech Tree, the Oath Book, the murals in the library and commencement exercises.

Many unique features of the school are covered in the book. Among them are the Marshall Artists Series, the Cam Henderson Center and the honors alumni and students have won.

The W. Page Pitt School of Journalism, the School of Medicine, the James E. Morrow Library and international education at Marshall also are included.

There are 12 chapters, 326 pages in the book and complete footnotes.

"Anybody interested in Marshall, and there are a lot in this state who are,
would enjoy the book," Moffat said.

"We're fortunate that Dr. Moffat took 20 years to write the book. We're pleased with the final publication," Karen C. Thomas, director of Alumni Affairs said. "The Alumni Association is proud we were asked to sponsor the book, and we're awaiting sales."

Moffat is now working on a history of the Cabell County Medical Society.

It is estimated that Moffat has taught 16,000 students in over 35 years at Marshall.

The book is available in the Marshall
Alumni Office, Memorial Student Center.

Swimmers to meet Morehead State today

By Colette Fraley

Today's 4 p.m. swimming meet in Gullickson Hall Natatorium with Morehead State will give MU swimmers the opportunity to do two things: participate in events other than one which they normally swim and renew an old rivalry.

"The meet will give our swimmers a chance to try some different events," Coach Bob Saunders said. "It will also give them a chance to see what kind of condition they're in, in areas outside their strong points.

But Saunders said that didn't mean MU would not have a strong, competitive team in the water.

"There will be plenty of intra-team rivalry going on," he said. "We won't be playing games out there and if I see we're getting into any trouble, there will be some switching around."

Today's meet also will give Marshall a chance to challenge a former rival, Saunders said. Records show that between 1969-76, MU defeated Morehead each of the seven times the schools faced each other in dual meets.

"Morehead was one of our biggest rivals when the program first began," Saunders said. "Then, Morehead discontinued its program in 1976. But this year the school built a new facility which included a competition-sized pool, so it would be embarrassing for it not to have a team."

Saunders said Morehead's current swim coach was formerly the track and field coach and has not had a lot of time to develop a swimming team.

The coach said there would be one disappointing factor in today's meet—not being able to swim in the new Henderson Center on any kind of regular basis until the spring semester.

"Gullickson just doesn't have much room for spectators," he said. "We'll just have to struggle with what we have until we can get into Henderson."

Wrestlers to face nationally-ranked team

Micki Auer

Marshall wrestling team will face nationally-ranked Indiana State University in its season opener tonight.

Indiana finished 14th in the nation last year and has four All-Americans who have returned to wrestle this year, Marshall Coach Ezra "Bear" Simpkins said.

"The big thing for Marshall is to get the valuable experience in wrestling with top competitors," Simpkins said. "We have three, maybe four, wrestlers who can wrestle with them."

Promising performances are expected from Preston Thompson, a 150-pound junior from Cincinnati, Ohio; Danny Ratliff, a 134-pound sophomore from Quinwood; and Tim Jones, a 158-pound junior from Spencer and defending Southern Conference champion.

Starting for Marshall in the 118-pound weight class will be Troy Goodson, Shady Spring freshman; in the 126-pound class will be Jim Haas, Dunbar sophomore; and in the 142-pound class will be Rod Pruett, Barboursville freshman.

Wrestling in the 167-pound class tonight will be freshman Bill Davenport of Kenova; in the 177-pound class will be freshman Bob Martin of Aliquippa, Pa.; and the heavyweight wrestler will be Jim Mahon, Ravenswood sophomore.

Mahon faces two-time national runner-up, senior Bruce Bumgartner, in the heavyweight class.

Simpkins said that most likely Marshall will forfeit in the 190-pound weight class.

"For Marshall to win would definitely be the upset of the collegiate season," Simpkins said.

Indiana wrestles Oklahoma State University, Iowa and Iowa State Universities and other top-ten teams, Simpkins said. The match tonight is one of Indiana's stops on an eastern tour, he said.

The time and location of the match are undetermined at this time, Simpkins said. If possible, the match will be held at 9:30 p.m. in the Memorial Fieldhouse, following the basketball exhibition. If not, the match will be held at 7:30 p.m. in Gullickson Hall, Simpkins said.

Indiana State win would mean 'progress'

By Patricia Proctor

Thundering Herd mentor Sonny Randle and Indiana State Coach Dennis Raetz both have important reasons for wanting to win the game which will be played in Fairfield Stadium at 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

If Marshall can come out on top Saturday, it will mean that the team has won one more game each year Randle has been its coach.

"It will mean progress," Randle said. "More than progress, winning the last two out of three games in a season will give us a heckuva lot to start on for next year.

"While anyone who has watched us play can tell we've improved, I would like our win-loss record to show it too," Randle said.

Randle said Indiana State is comparable to the University of Louisville, which defeated the Herd 36-0 in the fourth contest of the season. However, Randle said the Herd has improved considerably since that game.

"We are a much better football team than when we played Louisville," he said.

"Indiana State is a little like Louisville, because when they decide they are going to play ball, they are an excellent football team," he said. "They are a good defensive football team, and they have a wide open offense. They make their living throwing the ball, and they will throw it all over the place."

Raetz said the Sycamores will be prepared to play what they consider an important game.

"If we win this game, we will have a .500 season," he said. "Also, a lot of our kids are from western Pennsylvania, and this is as close as they get to home to play."

Raetz said, "Marshall is a much better football team than its record attests, as they proved by their win two weeks ago against Appalachian. It is going to be a tough football game for us."

Ted Carpenter will start at quarterback for the Herd. He has completed 51 of 102 passes for 712 yards and three touchdowns this season. Larry Fourqurean, who has rushed for 804 yards this season, will start at tailback.

Senior Darnel Richardson leads Herd receiving with 44 catches for 618 yards. Senior Jim Devine continues to lead the defense for the Herd with 166 tackling points.

Senior Reggie Allen is the quarterback for the Sycamores, and has already passed for 1,358 yards for Indiana State. He has thrown six touchdown passes and rushed for four touchdowns.

Leading rusher for the Sycamores is Eric Robinson, who has rushed for 754 yards on 151 carries. Eddie Ruffin leads receiving for Indiana State with 31 catches for 460 yards.

The Herd takes a record of 2-8 into Saturday's game, while the Sycamores are 4-5-1.

Noseguard Poncho Borgese, Pittsburgh Junior, takes time out to smile during football practice. Borgese is third on the team in tackling points with 161 this season. He was third on the team in tackling as a freshman with 165 and finished with 74 tackling points his sophomore year. His knee injury, which still plagues him, caused him to sit out four games last year. Borgese is a sports marketing and management major and plans to graduate in May or December 1983. Borgese cherishes Appy State triumph

By Patricia Proctor

Poncho Borgese says he was glad the Herd's first conference win was against Appalachian State, because the Mountaineers have given him more lasting problems than the two losses Marshall had the first two years he played them.

Borgese's biggest problem with his football career is a bad knee, courtesy, Appalachian State.

"When we beat them, it really surprised me," Borgese said. "I really wanted to get it against Appy State. The first year I played against them, I got strained ligaments in my knee. Then, last year I got torn ligaments against them. So my knee has been hurt since my freshman year."

Borgese said he has been wearing a brace on his knee since he tore the ligaments, and that his knee has been nagging him all season.

"My knee has affected my performance this season, because it really slows me down," he said. "My knee is going to need surgery, I'm sure, but I can't really say when."

Borgese also said he is not sure whether he will play football next year.

"I can't really say right now if I will play," he said. "It will depend on how my knee is and how the last game goes. It has been holding up all right, but I have to favor it all the time."

Borgese said his main reason for coming to Marshall was to get an education, and the best way for him to do that was through football.

"I didn't have the money to pay for an education, so I figured the best way to get it was to earn it with football," he said. "I decided to come to Marshall on very short notice, and I walked on the team my freshman year. My first goal out of high school was to play at a major college where they offer scholarships, and that is why I came here."

He was put on scholarship in 1979, he said.

Borgese is third on the team in tackling points with 161 this season. He was third on the team in tackling points his freshman year with 165, and finished with 74 tackling points his sophomore year, in which he sat out four games because of injury.

"Poncho is as fine a noseguard as you could find. He has played well for us and done a super job," Coach Sonny Randle said.

Randle also said Borgese's knee has affected his performance. "It is tough for Poncho playing with his knee the way it has been, because it has handicapped him. I am sure he would be the first one to tell you that," Randle said. "The thing about Poncho is that when the ball is snapped, he will play and give you everything he has got, and he will do that in every game. That's what it's all about."

Borgese said he has made the necessary sacrifices for football and has improved every year he has played.

"Every year, my strength has improved and my technique has improved," he said. "Our defense uses technique, and that's why with my size I can play at this level." (Borgese is 5-11 and weighs 215.)

Borgese said in his spare time, he likes to work out and keep his body in shape. "Any physical activity is basically what I like," he said. "I like to listen to music. I used to race motorcycles, but I don't anymore because of fear of injury, and also because you have to be light to race motocross."

The Pittsburgh native is majoring in sports marketing and management, and said he should either graduate in May or December, 1983.

"The discipline you find in a major college football program gets you set for the way your career is going to be,"

he said. "If you can do all that we do every day, it has got to help you later in life."

Borgese said he enjoys his major because "I feel I can help more people in this field, because of my experience with playing football."

He has only one sister, Lisa, who is one year older than he is, but said he comes from a large family.

"We have a big Italian family, and we all live close to each other, except for one uncle, who lives in San Francisco," he said. "I am 100 percent Italian. My grandfather was the first to come over from Italy, and he built a big house and gave all his sons a piece of the land to build on. That is why we are all close together."

Borgese said he has enjoyed playing Marshall football because he likes "being down in the middle where all the action is."

"The team has improved a lot since I have been here, and Coach Randle has helped us a lot," he said. "I am behind Coach Randle 100 percent, and we are doing all we can to get this thing to turn around. He is too. He is the man and he is doing everything he can to change the program."

Borgese said the season has been going well. "We just need to get that little extra kick, and once we put it all together we are going to have a heck of a football team," he said. "We have improved every year-you can tell that by watching us. Anyone who can't tell that is blind."

Borgese said he thinks the community can see improvement too. "The community has stuck with us a lot longer than last year and the year before," he said. "We just need them to hang in there a little longer. They don't realize how much they help us."

"A lot of us have done and are doing everything in our power to turn this thing around and get it going in the right direction," he said. "We just need all the support we can get, and everyone to stick behind us, and we will get it done."
